Judge Peebles complains that a great personal wrong has been done him by E. L. Middleton. State secretary of the Baptist Sunday-School Board, and others, who have taken the lend in bringing about the public criticism of his ruling.

"Not Divine Worship."

He says the statute, No. 3796, of the revisal, applies specifically to meetings for "divine worship," and that his ruling was not that a Sunday school is not a "religious body," but that it is not a meeting for "divine worship," but that it is not a meeting for "divine worship," but that it is not a meeting for "divine worship," brimarily, but for teaching children the Bible, and that purpose of the meeting gives character to the meeting, and not the incidents, the prayers and other worshipful forms in the Sunday school being merely incidents to the purpose of biblical instruction.

The judge suggests that the two men—Henry Branner and Merritt Beck —be indicted under anorier statute, No. 3704, that provides for the punishment of disturbers of schools and similar public gatherings, which, he ruled, would more properly apply. He is anxious, too, for the State Supreme Court to pass on the ruling he mide.
